

I just read about the lobbying taking place to ban weather and traffic reports on satellite radio. I am a little concerned and surprised that anyone would really care about a 2 or 3 minute prerecorded, overplayed blurb on a radio and if it is worth getting upset over. I recently traveled acrossed the United States in my vehicle and wanted to find current weather in the area into which I was heading. Unfortunately, the satellite info and the local station info were both inadequate and neither suited my needs. The info on the satellite is prerecorded and is helpful for somethings. The local stations are so full of commercials that I just turn them off and don't bother to listen anyway. This is such a meneal thing to even worry about. Let the satellite continue to broadcast whatever they choose and the radio can broadcast as they choose. Who really cares??? There are so much more important things in this world right now going on right now that need attention and this is not one of them.

The United States supposedly prides itself on freedom of speech. Freedom of speech as long as it is something they want to say or hear??
